

Governor's Land residents featured in Williamsburg publications for the volunteerism

By Amy Johnson

In the News...

Several residents in Governor's Land at Two Rivers were featured in prominent Williamsburg publications recently for their superior community involvement. Governor's Land values volunteerism and is proud of its many active residents.

* Jim White of Governor's Land was featured in the August issue of Next Door Neighbors. The in-depth article highlighted White's involvement in various organizations, including All Together, William & Mary's Executive Partners Program, the York-James City-Williamsburg NAACP and the Williamsburg Community Health Foundation. Retired from the human resources field, White was acknowledged for his ability to help people realize their full potential.

* Sue-Ellen Fitzpatrick was profiled in the July issue of the Virginia Gazette's Home Magazine for her volunteer and staff work Dream Catchers at the Cori Sikich Therapeutic Riding Center in Toano. In addition to helping special-needs children through equine therapy, Fitzpatrick spends numerous hours behind the scenes planning special fundraising events. In the Governor's Land neighborhood, she has also spent many hours organizing the 5K Run for the Brain, a certified 5K Colonial Roadrunners race.

* Men's Charity Tennis also received a nod in the Virginia Gazette's Home Magazine. The group was spotlighted in the August issue for the success of its annual fundraising tennis tournament benefiting the Hospice House and Support Care of Williamsburg. Last year the group raised $47,000 for Hospice House. Organizer Bob Kiley of Governor's Land said he hopes this year's October tournament will surpass $50,000.